Tasty bread rolls

1. Roll the flour with salt through a sieve into a large bowl. Add the yeast and stir in. Then make a hole in the middle of the flour.

2. Add the water, oil and sugar with salt. Stir the mixture until it is thick and sticky. Add the yeast.

Hungry Gungi

Wheat doesn't look very lively, but it's actually alive. It's made up of living tiny living things called micro-organisms. Wheat feeds off a chemical in the flour called starch. As it does this, it gives off a gas that gets trapped in the dough, making it rise. When you break open a bread roll, you can see where the bubbles of gas were trapped inside.
